Royal BodyCare Changes Name to RBC Life Sciences

Irving, Texas (November 22, 2005) - Royal BodyCare, Inc. (ROBE OTC:BB) announced that the Company has changed the name of its US nutritional products subsidiary to RBC Life Sciences, USA, Inc.

Clinton Howard, the Company's CEO, explained, "This is one important element in a series of actions we are taking to more clearly describe our nutritional products business to customers, to reflect the advanced level of biotechnology that goes into each of our products, and to improve the direct marketing opportunity for our sales Associates.

"In addition, the Board of Directors will recommend to its shareholders at the next annual meeting that the name of the parent Company be changed to RBC Life Sciences, Inc."

The Company formulates research-based dietary supplements and manufactures nanoscale compounds, branded as NanoCeuticals™, designed to improve absorption of nutrients in the body, and the antioxidant Microhydrin® which neutralizes oxidized free radicals. Company products are marketed through independent distributors in North America, and through licensees in other countries, from its Las Colinas headquarters in Irving, Texas, and from its branch office in Vancouver, BC, Canada.

A separate wholly-owned subsidiary, MPM Medical, Inc, develops and markets a line of research-based wound care products sold over-the-counter and by prescription in the U.S. through wholesalers, hospitals, clinics, cancer centers and nursing homes.
